It is hard today to escape images of violence in our media: from ISIS beheadings to drone attacks, from violence against women to violence against the environment, from the violence of the military industrial complex to the violence of poverty, we are all victims and perpetrators of aggression.

This is a good time, then, to pause and ponder a few questions:
- Are we violent by nature or made violent by society? (Hobbes/Freud vs. Rousseau)
- Has western civilization made us potentially more violent or less violent? (Zygmunt Bauman vs. Norbert Elias)
- Is violence integral to politics or incidental? (Aristotle vs. Agamben)
- Is violence primarily physical or symbolic? (Judith Butler/Edward Said vs. Randall Collins)
- Is the violence of the oppressed legitimate? (Frantz Fanon vs. Robyn Green)
- But most importantly, what is violence anyway?

The overall orientation of the course is theoretical. Only occasionally will we consider and discuss specific historical cases of violence and cruelty, such as colonialism and neo-colonialism to the Holocaust, terrorism and the so-called war on terror. Students are expected to read and engage with difficult theoretical texts. The final project will be a creative research essay in which students will develop a theoretical perspective on violence. You will not merely regurgitate theory but actively engage in theorizing.

Course objectives
By the end of the term, you should be able to
- distinguish between and identify various forms of violence;
- identify major debates within the field of social theories of violence;
- critically apply theories to actual cases of historical and contemporary violence.

Skills
Students who pass this course will hone their skills at
- evaluating and applying abstract concepts and theoretical perspectives to particular cases of violence
- synthesizing theoretical materials with personal observations and experiences
- organizing and summarizing information and textual material
- conducting library and media research
• writing research reports and essays
• critically analyzing information presented in multi-media
• expressing informed views on national and international issues

Course texts
Custom course package on eClass.

In class activities: A mixture of lectures and class discussions will be used.

Course evaluation
Term paper outline: A brief 1-2 page description of your topic, main argument, key concepts and readings to be used. NO POINT FORM! Submit by Nov 29. Oral presentation: Nov. 30.

Term paper: See attached guideline.

Seminar worksheets: Seminar worksheets will be posted in the Assignments section of eClass prior to the due date. Students will have to fill them out, post them online on eClass and also bring a copy (digital or hard copy) to class for discussions. Seminar worksheets are designed to help you identify the author’s key argument and discuss key passages in the text.

Optional presentations
If you feel confident in your ability to interpret and present on theoretical texts, you are welcome to present on one or a set of class readings by coordinating with me directly.

Attendance: Required on seminar worksheet days, highly recommended on all other days.

Policies and Procedure

“Policy about course outlines” can be found in Course Requirements, Evaluation Procedures and Grading of the University Calendar.”

Academic honesty: “The University of Alberta is committed to the highest standards of academic integrity and honesty. Students are expected to be familiar with these standards regarding academic honesty and to uphold the policies of the University in this respect. Students are particularly urged to familiarize themselves with the provisions of the Code of Student Behaviour (online at http://www.governance.ualberta.ca/) and avoid any behaviour that could potentially result in suspicions of cheating, plagiarism, misrepresentation of facts and/or participation in an offence. Academic dishonesty is a serious offence and can result in suspension or expulsion from the University.”

Learning and working environment
The Faculty of Arts is committed to ensuring that all students, faculty and staff are able to work and study in an environment that is safe and free from discrimination and harassment. It does not tolerate behaviour that undermines that environment. The department urges anyone who feels that this policy is being violated to:
• Discuss the matter with the person whose behaviour is causing concern; or
• If that discussion is unsatisfactory, or there is concern that direct discussion is inappropriate or threatening, discuss it with the Chair of the Department.
For additional advice or assistance regarding this policy you may contact the student ombudservice: (http://www.ombudservice.ualberta.ca/). Information about the University of Alberta Discrimination and Harassment Policy and Procedures can be found in the GFC Policy Manual, available at http://gfcpolicymanual.ualberta.ca/.

Recording of Lectures:
“Audio or video recording, digital or otherwise, of lectures, labs, seminars or any other teaching environment by students is allowed only with the prior written consent of the instructor or as a part of an approved accommodation plan. Student or instructor content, digital or otherwise, created and/or used within the context of the course is to be used solely for personal study, and is not to be used or distributed for any other purpose without prior written consent from the content author(s).”

Attendance, Absences, and Missed Grade Components:
Regular attendance is essential for optimal performance in any course. In cases of potentially excusable absences due to illness or domestic affliction, notify your instructor by e-mail within two days. Regarding absences that may be excusable and procedures for addressing course components missed as a result, consult Attendance of the University Calendar. Be aware that unexcused absences will result in partial or total loss of the grade for the “attendance and participation” component(s) of a course, as well as for any assignments that are not handed-in or completed as a result. Students with an excused absence from an exam will be given an opportunity to make up the exam.

In this course, attendance is not required. However, regular attendance has shown to dramatically improve a student’s learning and performance.

Policy for Missed or Late Assignments:
Students will be penalized 5 points per day for late submissions unless previously authorized by the instructor. Any student missing any assignments will receive a remark of 1 next to their final grade, indicating missed term work.

You may bring a doctor's note if you miss an assignment due to illness, however this cannot be required. If you do not have a doctor’s note, you can do one of the following:

• “University of Alberta Medical Statement” signed by a doctor (this cannot be required, but must be accepted if provided in lieu of other documents). http://www.registrarsoffice.ualberta.ca/en/Online-Services/~/media/registrar/Forms/2010_Medical_Statement.pdf
• "Medical Declaration Form for Students" (for Faculty of Arts students, can also be obtained in the Sociology Office)
• "Statutory Declaration" (for students in Faculties other than Arts, to be obtained from the Office of the Registrar)

For other acceptable absences, such as domestic afflictions or religious convictions, the student should submit appropriate documentation. This could include the following:
· For a death in the family – a copy of the death certificate
· For a religious conflict – a letter from the church or pastor
· For a car accident – a copy of the accident report

Student Accessibility Services (SAS):
If you have special needs that could affect your performance in this class, please let me know during the first week of the term so that appropriate arrangements can be made. If you are not already registered with SAS, contact their office immediately (1-800 SUB; Email ssdsrec@ualberta.ca; Email; phone 780-492-3381; WEB www.ssds.ualberta.ca ).
GUIDELINE FOR OPTIONAL PRESENTATIONS

Presentations

Seminar presentations are not supposed to function as lectures (I will do that as needed). Student presentations are expected to consist at least one of the following elements:

1. Identifying and conducting a detailed discussion of the core arguments and significant concepts and passages in the readings. Since we are engaging in debates, you must identify the position of the author and how it is distinct and different from positions taken by other authors. Your task is also to unpack parts of the text that you consider to be significant, interesting, challenging, provocative, absurd, illogical, thought provoking, in need of detailed discussion, etc. Sometimes a single concept or sentence can generate a lengthy discussion.

2. Finding and presenting illustrative material, including online clips, films, short fiction, video games, news stories, photos, etc.

3. Finding linkages between what is discussed in the text and what is going on in the outside world (current events, historical events, etc).

GUIDELINES FOR TERM PAPERS
SOC435/503
Zohreh Bayatrizi

I. Requirements

Undergraduate students:
You are expected to make direct use of at least three authors discussed in the seminar. The use of external sources is not required but if such sources are consulted, you MUST cite them.

All papers must be typed and double-spaced, and about 10-12 pages long.

Term papers are due December 7 by 4pm on eClass.

Graduate students
You are expected to make direct use of at least three authors discussed in the seminar as well as at least five external academic sources (articles and chapters published in academic journals or academic books). You may consult and reference non-academic sources on top of academic sources, if you wish. Make sure to properly reference all of your sources.

All papers must be typed and double-spaced, and about 20 pages long.

Term papers are due December 7 by 4pm on eClass.

II. Expectations and recommendations

1- Finding a topic
Seminar participants are encouraged to find a research topic early in the term and discuss it with the instructor. Your topic should be chosen so as to allow you to write an analytical paper or to apply the theories covered in the seminar to a specific issue or case.

Start by going over the points made in the readings and in class and find something that interests you. Then formulate a few questions, which will narrow down your topic.

Example of potential paper subjects:
- Structural explanations for violent crimes
- can individuals be held responsible for structural violence?
- War crimes: Are they sociogenic or psychogenic?
- Civilian casualties in the “War on Terror”
- Comparison between Foucault and Elias as relating to the history of violence

2- Choosing an approach
Your analysis should draw upon personal opinion, but opinion cannot be merely anecdotal or arbitrary. Rather it should be an informed perspective on a subject. Here is a description of some common approaches:

A) Analysing key concepts and passages: in this case you develop your own close reading of selected texts, paying attention to how they fit into each author’s overall theory and method. Illustrate the main ideas of the authors using examples, and assess the implications and limits of key concepts.

B) Discussing a critique or a comparison: here your main task is to present an author’s ideas in light of another’s, for example a comparison of the works of Foucault and Durkheim. Your essay should assess the main insights of each author and point out any blind spots in the works discussed.

C) WITH PRIOR PERMISSION OF THE INSTRUCTOR Interpreting an event, document, or fictional work: this requires you to apply theoretical concepts to your understanding of a current event, story, video game, film, document, or anything else which interests you. Your analysis should assess the limits and uses of these theories or methods in light of their application. This is the hardest approach to take because students have a very difficult time maintaining their theoretical focus while writing about an empirical issue.

3- Structuring your essay
Your essay should have three main elements:

A) INTRODUCTION, which formulates a problem, theme, or question, and states the particular approach you are taking;

B) BODY, in which your arguments and examples are presented to show clearly their connection to one another;

C) CONCLUSION, which may summarize some of the themes you have addressed, raise related problems you have not touched on, make tentative conclusions or hypotheses, or speculate on the implications of your discussion.

4- Writing your essay
You are expected to use your sources in a manner that shows you have actually read them. This means you have to make extensive use of these sources, beyond merely citing them or alluding to them once or twice. You need to demonstrate that you are aware of the main arguments as well as the details and nuances of these sources, including examples and illustrations discussed in them. General summaries of the text and its main arguments are usually not enough.

Make sure that you have a balance of course texts, external sources (for graduate students), and your own analysis.

Explain all key words and concepts you are using (e.g., ‘bio-power’, ‘the civilizing process’, etc.)

Make up a title and a subtitle that expresses what is distinctive about your topic, or the approach or perspective you take. You can leave this until your essay is complete. Do not use generic titles such as ‘A Comparison between Elias and Foucault’ or ‘War Crimes’.

When you quote, paraphrase, or consult someone else’s work, you must cite the source in the text. The simplest way of doing this is: (Author's Last Name, Publication Date: pages); e.g., (Mills, 1959: 7). Or you can use one of the existing standard styles.

Include a bibliography of works quoted or consulted. Here is a simple model to use, (although you can use any standardized format).

Author's Last Name, First Name, "Title of Article or Chapter", Title of Book or Journal, Place of Publication, Date of Publication, pp.

Print a first draft of your essay to make additions, corrections, and editing on. Make necessary changes and print a final draft, however, if you still detect typos or things you wish to change, don't be afraid of marking them on the final draft before handing it in.

5- Evaluation
Papers will be graded on the following three criteria:
- Analysis, including the formulation of valid, original arguments supported by textual evidence (as opposed to simply description or summary) (about 50% of final mark)
- Coherence and organization, including taking logical steps to build your arguments and presenting them in an organized fashion (about 40% of final mark)
- Grammar, punctuation, sentence structure, spelling (about 10% of final mark)

Here’s a more detailed list of things I will look for while grading essays and papers:

- Argument: need to have a core argument that is clearly stated in the beginning and expanded on through the write up.
- Textual evidence: need to back up your claims by citing evidence from the text. Quotation and paraphrasing.
• Explication: accuracy, precision, explaining quotations and paraphrases and key concepts
• Coherence: need to focus on a central argument and avoid making too many unrelated arguments. Paragraphs must be interlinked logically and conceptually.
• Overall quality of writing: insightfulness, rigor, challenging topics or arguments
• Opinion: is it informed opinion? Is there too much opinion and too little textual evidence?
• Style: Grammar, spelling, syntax.
• Format: length, margins, citation.
• Use of outside sources: proper citation, academic honesty.
• Other (will specify when grading)

Grades:
A: independent analysis, innovative arguments, no major mistakes.
B: independent analysis, no major mistakes.
C: independent analysis with some flaws (in structure and arguments)
D: summary, no analysis
F: papers that merely register the student’s own opinion; papers representing serious misunderstanding of the texts, improper citing or no citation of books or online sources, papers that miss required elements laid out in section I.
